YOUR MISSION:

To close with the enemy by means of fire and maneuver in order to destroy or capture him, or repel his assaults by fire, close combat, and counterattack.

US Army Field Manual FM 7-10: The Infantry Rifle Company

Korea, Naktong River, August - September, 1950

In June 1950 the North Korean People's Army (NKPA) invaded South Korea in wide-ranging attacks across the 38th parallel. South Korean forces and United Nations troops already in theatre were fully committed to battle. Shortly afterwards, President Truman gave the order to commit US forces to the UN taskforce and the 9th Infantry Regiment "Manchus" became the first unit to reach Korea directly from the United States, arriving in Pusan on July 23, where they were quickly pushed into a desperate defense of the Pusan Perimeter.

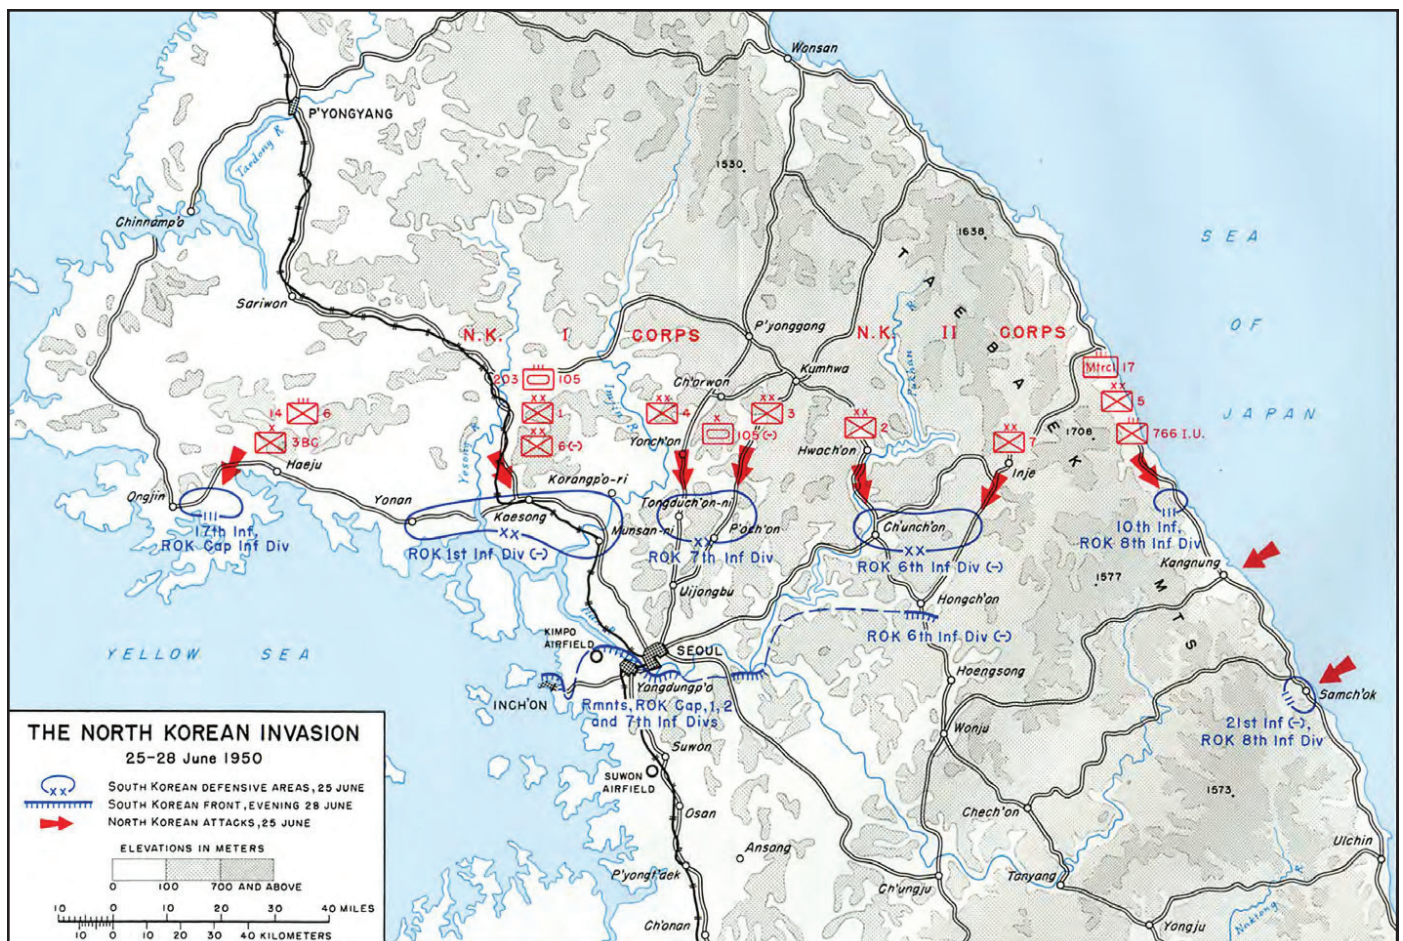

The regiment, minus its 3rd battalion who were retained as the Army reserve, was formed into a Regimental Combat Team (9th RCT) by attaching tank and artillery units, and was allocated to the hard-hit 24th Infantry Division on August 8th, 1950. Colonel John G. Hill was given command of Task Force Hill consisting of his 9th Infantry, the badly understrength 19th and 34th Infantry and the 1st Battalion, 21st Infantry and several artillery battalions. For the next ten days the Manchus battled the 16th Regiment of the 4th NKPA Division (reinforced) for Hill 165, known as the "Cloverleaf". The hill finally fell on August 18th following the arrival of reinforcements in the form of the 1st Provisional Marine Brigade and the battered 4th NKPA Division withdrew back across the Naktong River, where US forces established a new defensive line. The fight for the Cloverleaf resulted in 161 Manchus killed in action.

On August 24th, the remainder of 2nd Infantry Division (the 23rd and 32nd Infantry Regiments) relieved the depleted 24th Infantry Division along the Naktong "Bulge" River Line Sector. The 9th RCT was responsible for the southern sector on the left flank of the Division. This was more than 18 km of frontage and the RCT was very thinly spread, with companies responsible for 4km sectors and platoons covering 500m fronts along the entire Naktong Bulge. The extended front forced the Manchus to have five of the six rifle companies that made up its 1st and 2nd battalion on the line with the companies arranged from North to South as Companies G, F, B, C and then A.

Whilst manning these positions the Manchus then suffered the brunt of the last major North Korean offensive, from August 31st – September 3rd.

This map shows the locations of the missions as Company F would have experienced them. The positions of the other companies fighting along the perimeter (missions 2 and 3) before falling back are also noted.

Company E had pulled out of the line and were caught off-guard while moving up in the seam between Companies B & C in preparation for a raid across the Naktong known as Operation Manchu. They had to fight their way back to friendly lines. Company C, holding Hill 201 as part of their sector, disintegrated rapidly under the massed assault. Company B was pushed back into successive defensive positions. Company A managed to hold their original line the longest, but by the morning of September 1st they were also forced to retire, or else be cut off.

The companies of the 2nd Battalion fell back in good order to Yongsan, where they had started on August 8th. 2nd Battalion reinforced by tanks and engineers counterattacked on the afternoon of September 2nd and managed to halt the North Korean advance.

The battered division was reorganized into two Task Forces. One, under the command of the Division Artillery Commander, Brigadier General Loyal M. Haynes, was responsible for the northern sector of the Division Zone. It consisted of the remaining elements of the 38th and 23rd Infantry, Co C of the 72nd Tank Battalion, and supporting artillery. The second task force was commanded by Brigadier General Joseph S. Bradley, assistant division commander, and consisted of elements of the 9th Infantry (still minus 3rd Bn), elements of 72nd Tank Battalion, 2nd Engineer Combat Battalion, and supporting artillery.

After the situation was stabilized and 4,500 Korean replacements poured into the division, the 9th RCT with Colonel Charles C. Sloane in command counterattacked, starting nearly three weeks of fighting that pushed the North Koreans back across the river.

The Third Battalion, 9th Infantry would not rejoin the 9th RCT until September 18th to lead in the final seizure of Hill 201 the following day.

The Manchus would go on to participate in further offensives with 2nd Division over the next few months. In late November 1950, however, a massive Chinese counteroffensive at Kujang-dong devastated the regiment, and heavy fighting continued as the Division 'ran the gauntlet' to a new defensive line at Kunu-ri. In the fighting, the 1st Battalion was completely lost, and the 2nd and 3rd battalions were each reduced to less than half strength. After being reorganized and refitted, over the remainder of the war the 9th would go on to participate in the hill battles — "Bloody Ridge," "Heartbreak Ridge," "Old Baldy," and "Pork Chop Hill."

Korean War Infantry Regiment Organization

  The Infantry Regiment (RGT) was commanded by a Colonel (Col). It had three infantry battalions, a headquarters and headquarters company (HHC), a medium tank company of 17 M4 Shermans, a heavy mortar company of 6 4.2" (107mm) mortars, a service company, and a medical company.

    The Infantry Battalion (BN) was commanded by a Lieutenant Colonel (LtCol). It had three rifle companies, an HHC, and a weapons company. The weapons company had a mortar platoon of 4 81mm mortars, one machine gun platoon of 4 M1917A1 .30 cal heavy and 4 M1919A4 light machine guns, and an anti-armor platoon of 4 75mm recoilless rifles (RCLs).

   The Rifle Company (CO) was commanded by a Captain (Capt). It had three rifle platoons, a headquarters platoon, and a weapons platoon. The weapons platoon had a mortar section of 3 60mm mortars and an anti-armor section of 3 57mm RCLs.

  The Rifle Platoon (PLT) was led by a Second Lieutenant (2ndLt) and a Sergeant First Class (SFC). It had three rifle squads and a weapons squad with 1 M1919A6 light machine gun and a Bazooka. It is the primary maneuver element of a rifle company.

  The Rifle Squad (SQD) was led by a Staff Sergeant (SSgt). The Army was operating under reduced manning in 1950-52 so they typically hovered around 6-9 soldiers. A 1952 organization change would set the established strength at 9 soldiers. It had two M1918 Browning Automatic Rifles (BAR), and the rest used the M1 Garand rifle, with one having the rifle grenade attachment. There was less variety on small arms and the M2 carbine that had replaced the M1 carbine was not as popular as the M1 due to the low power bullet and more frequent jams. BARs were also less popular as the weapons themselves had become less reliable through age.

The Korean War Infantry Regiment formed the nucleus of a Regimental Combat Team (RCT) concept that employed the RCT in a more independent role from the division. The regiment had lots of firepower and with its own tanks and attached artillery was a very powerful formation.

Korean Augmentation to US Army (KATUSA)

The KATUSA were members of the South Korean Army assigned to US Army units down to the company level. The program was started in July 1950 as the US had severe manpower shortages and little knowledge of Korea. Both conscripts and volunteers would attend training and then be assigned to their units where they could be assigned directly within US companies. Given the language and cultural barriers they were typically made into their own squads and platoons. The program continues to this day to strengthen the interoperability of a now much more capable and professional South Korean Army and the US Army. During the Korean War 43,660 Korean soldiers served in the KATUSA program, suffering 11,365 killed or missing.

The 9th Infantry Regiment was organized as follows:

North Korean Forces

The North Korean Peoples' Army (NKPA) invaded South Korea with 7 infantry divisions, an armored brigade of 150 T-34/85s, and a mechanized brigade (the 206th) divided into two corps with I Corps in the West and II Corps in the East. It numbered some 90,000 men.

1st Infantry Division: 20th, 22nd, and 24th Infantry Regiments

2nd Infantry Division: 4th, 16th, and 17th Infantry Regiments

3rd Infantry Division: 7th, 8th, and 9th Infantry Regiments

4th Infantry Division: 5th, 16th, and 18th Infantry Regiments

5th Infantry Division: 10th, 11th, and 12th Infantry Regiments

6th Infantry Division: 13th, 14th, and 15th Infantry Regiments

7th Infantry Division: 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Infantry Regiments

105th Armored Brigade: 107th, 109th, and 203rd Armored Regiments

206th Mechanized Infantry Brigade

The North Korean troops were tough veterans, skilled from fighting the Japanese, but their biggest factor was their mass. By the time of the Pusan Perimeter fighting, however, they had lost as many as 58,000 men and were forced to rapidly raise conscripts, including many South Koreans from recently conquered territory. They called forward their reserve divisions and formed completely new ones.

The NKPA fielded 10 Infantry Divisions at the Pusan Perimeter, though four of these (9th, 10th, 13th, and 15th) were reserve units and a further two (the 8th and 12th) had been newly raised. They were supported by elements of the 105th Armored Brigade (this Brigade was upgraded to a Division in late 1950).

At the Naktong River, the 4th and 9th Infantry Divisions and elements of the 14th and 16th Mechanized Divisions comprised the North Korean strike force facing the Manchus. They were equipped along Soviet lines; a division of three regiments, a regiment of three battalions, a battalion of three companies, a company of three platoons, and a platoon of three squads. Each squad was equipped with a DP light machine gun, a submachine gun or two (Shpagin PPSH41 or PPSh43—US troops called these “Burp Guns” due to the sound they made when firing), and Mosin-Nagant M1891 rifles or M1944 carbines. Machine gun platoons had the Soviet SPM and SG43 wheeled heavy machine guns. The Mechanized units used trucks, and each had tank units equipped with T-34/85s.

All their formations were under strength. The 4th Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Lee Kwon Mu, had about 7,000 men on 5 August. The tough fighting for the Clover Leaf and Obong Ni reduced them to around 3,500 by the 19th. The division rapidly received “mobilized” replacements and participated in the 31 August attack, but with no more than 5,000 troops. The NKPA 9th Infantry Division did not arrive on the Perimeter until 25 August, in preparation for the major offensive of night of 31 August. Commanded by Maj. Gen. Kim T’ae Mo, this consisted of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Infantry Regiments, with a strength of about 9,350 men, though the 3rd Infantry Regiment remained behind to secure the Inchon area.

There were several tank battles during the Naktong fighting, though the North Koreans were not adept at armor tactics, and the terrain limited their use. Manchus knocked out two T-34/85s with bazookas during the Cloverleaf fighting and the Marines just south of the Cloverleaf had a couple of tank-versus-tank engagements.

The North Koreans also fielded SU-76M assault guns as mobile artillery. The infantry used 82mm and 120mm Mortars and had some artillery (76.2mm field guns) but lacked long-range heavy guns.

The Soviet-style North Korean units were very vulnerable to US Airstrikes, which took a dramatic toll, although due to the sheer numbers of North Korean troops it may not have seemed that way to the frontline units. The rapidity of the North Korean collapse after the failure at the Naktong River is a good indication of the effectiveness of the Air Support. Unfortunately for the North Koreans, US rifle companies had received a significant increase in firepower after WWII; more machine guns, more bazookas, and the presence of recoilless rifles all helped the US units. Even though they were thinly spread, they inflicted serious punishment on the enemy.

Naktong River Campaign Unit Guide

9th Infantry

The CO HQ includes the Company Commander (you, a Captain) and various radio operators, linemen and other assistants.

The XO (Executive Officer) is a Lieutenant and is second in command of the Company.

The Company First Sergeant is the senior enlisted advisor to the Company Commander.

Platoon HQs include the Platoon Commander (a 2nd Lieutenant), Platoon Sergeant and radio operators.

Squads are made up of around 6-9 men. They are armed with the M1 Garand rifle, and two Browning Automatic Rifles (BAR).

LMG teams use .30 cal machine guns mounted on bipods (the M1919A6).

The Heavy Machine Gun teams use .50 cal and .30 cal machine guns mounted on heavy tripods.

Bazooka teams are armed with the M20 3.5" 'Super Bazooka'.

The Company are supported by Recoilless Rifle teams armed with either M18 57mm or M20 75mm Recoilless Rifles in each mission.

Runners carry messages to and from the CO HQ.

During the Naktong campaign you may receive South Korean troops (KATUSA - Korean Augmentees to US Army) as replacements. They were equipped similarly to US Squads.

NKPA Units

North Korean infantry squads were mostly armed with bolt-action rifles (Mosin Nagant M1891), a DP Machine Gun and a few carbines and sub-machine guns.

NKPA heavy weapon companies used Soviet PM and SG43 wheeled heavy machine guns.

The North Koreans used a variety of scoped bolt-action rifles as sniper rifles.

North Korean infantry units used a variety of mortars for indirect fire support at Company and Battalion level. Heavy mortars (off-map) were also available to larger formations.

The North Koreans fielded Soviet armor: T-34 tanks and SU-76M self-propelled assault guns.

Campaign Special Rules (CSR)

1. Communications

-   The SCR536 Radios making up the CO TAC Network may be replaced by EE8 Field Phones in each Offensive or Defensive mission. 4 Phone Lines are provided as assets in each mission if Phones are used.
- The CO HQ may also replace the BN TAC SCR300 Radio with a Field Phone. (This is not a requirement, even if the CO TAC Network is using Field Phones.)
- Other Networks remain on radios.

Historical Note: The Army went to Korea with the same radios it had at the end of World War II. By the end of the war a new family of radios would be fielded that were interoperable with broader bandwidths. The Signal Corps Radio (SCR) lexicon would be replaced with the Portable Radio Communicator (PRC).

2. 60mm Mortar Section and Mortar Teams

-  The H VOF rated multi-step Mortar Section is used in every mission, unless lack of replacements leaves you with just one step (in which case a Mortar Team can be used).
- During combat, F or A Hit results on the Mortar Section will reduce affected Steps to Fire Teams. Use the Fire Team side of a 1-step Mortar team. One 60mm Mortar Section is made up of three mortars. If only one step remains, place a 1-step mortar team (see breakdown diagram).

-    When the Mortar Section breaks down, each Fire Team receives the same amount of mortar ammo as the Section carried (ammo is not divided, as the number of rounds represented by a single ammo point is much less for a single Mortar Team than a whole Section).
- The 60mm mortar section cannot be split voluntarily during a mission.
- Detached Mortar Teams cannot reconstitute into a Mortar Section during a mission.

3. Infiltration

If a Squad Infiltration Attempt enemy package is drawn, make an Infiltrate Attempt by drawing two cards (adjusted for Experience) and look for the Infiltrate icon. If that action is successful, place the new enemy unit on the placement card, not Exposed, and under the best non-US occupied Cover marker currently on the card. If the action is not successful, place the enemy unit on the card, out of cover, and marked as Exposed. No actual movement takes place, the Attempt is only made to determine the Exposed status of the unit on its placement card.

4. Replacements

- After Mission 1: Receive up to 8 steps of US replacements.
- In Mission 6: KATUSA troops may become available (see mission 6 MSR).

Design Note: The battles along the Naktong River line stretched the limits of the Manchus as replacements were pulled from support units. When those ran out, KATUSA (Korean Augmentees to US Army) troops were used as replacements. The first of these South Korean soldiers (out of an eventual 4,500) were incorporated into the division during the first week of September.

5. Counter Attack Event

When the Counter Attack event is drawn, immediately place a PC A marker on all US occupied cards that are either:

- a) adjacent to a card with an unrevealed PC marker or
- b) adjacent to a card not occupied by US forces or
- c) in the top Row

Discard existing markers as per 8.2.3. Change Enemy Tactics to Offensive Assault for three turns (including this turn). Mark the final turn of the Counter Attack with the turn-track marker provided. The sequence of play does not change. Resolve any PC A markers using the Counter Attack chart in place of the regular PC A chart.

6. Cover

For Village cards, when cover is found it may be a building or standard cover. Draw on the table below:

R#	Cover type
1/5	Strong Building (+3)
2/5	Strong Building (+3)
3/5	Light Building (+2)
4/5	Light Building (+2)
5/5	Basic Cover (+1)

If an enemy force package is placed in a Village, consult the table above and if the building cover value is the same or better than the enemy cover listed in the enemy package chart, place them in the building.

7. Deep Bunkers

These represent bomb shelters and command bunkers. Deep Bunkers can be occupied and fired upon like regular bunkers. However the units inside do not exert a VOF and may not Spot, deploy pyrotechnics or make Grenade Attacks. Enemy units will leave the bunker upon drawing Fall Back or Grenade Attack actions in the enemy activity phase as per 5.3.2. Being in the bunker does not affect LOS.

8. Hills & Embankments

The Base elevation level of the map is level 1. Terrain on a hill adds one level as usual. An Embankment card by itself is at level 2 (Base + 1). An Embankment card on a Hill is at level 3 (Base +1 +1). The dark borders of a Hill card take precedence over any white borders on an Embankment card.

9. Enemy Vehicle Actions

All enemy vehicles are Activated for Vehicle Movement & AT Combat every turn. They take no actions during the Enemy Action Phase (except to Shift and Cease fire in line with other units on their card). Each vehicle takes a Vehicle Action during the Vehicle Phase according to the list of priorities in each mission.

MISSION 1 - BATTLE FOR THE CLOVERLEAF

August 8 to 18, 1950

On the night of 5-6 August, the 3rd Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment of the NKPA 4th Division forded the Naktong River. They made contact with the 3rd Battalion, 34th Infantry, 24th Infantry Division and pushed them back. A counterattack by 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry walked into an ambush at the former 3rd Battalion Headquarters. The NKPA successfully penetrated nearly 5km past the Naktong River and was halfway to Yongsan. Attempts by the 4th NKPA Division to cross at other points were repulsed. The 24th Infantry Division has been fighting to contain the bridgehead for days. The 9th Regimental Combat Team (RCT) is attached to 24th Infantry Division. The “Cloverleaf” hill complex is the farthest point of the enemy bridgehead, 9th RCT will attack and seize this critical position that is held by an understrength regiment.

9th RCT, though fresh, struggled to retake the position and the fighting was back and forth until the 1st Provisional Marine Brigade was committed to attack the Obong Ni Ridge (also known as “No Name Ridge”) just to the South of the Cloverleaf. On 17 August a coordinated attack by 9th RCT against the Cloverleaf and the Marines against the Obong Ni Ridge broke the resistance and pushed them back to the Naktong River. The NKPA 4th Division had lost half of its strength and would not be fully refitted until the end of the war.

Mission Special Rules (MSR)

1. Planned Counter Attack

Late on the 10th of August the NKPA counterattacked. During the Second Attempt, do not draw for an Enemy Higher HQ Event on Turn 7; it is automatically a Counter Attack event (CSR 5).

2. Replacements

Receive up to 8 Steps of US Replacements at the end of this mission.

3. Enemy Tank Priorities

Priority	Action
1	AT Fire against any visible US Vehicle
2	Attempt to Concentrate Fire on any US Bazooka team or RCL Team under VOF
3	Move to the closest card with a better Cover & Concealment Rating*
4	Attempt to Concentrate Fire on US LMG or HMG under VOF

* While Moving, the T-34/85 tanks will stop and use their Move & Fire capability to fulfill priority 1 as soon as they have a target in LOS at any range.

4. HMG Platoon

An entire Heavy Machine Gun (HMG) platoon is attached to the company for the mission. In addition to four .30 cal tripod-mounted machine gun teams, a platoon headquarters is also included. The HMG PLT HQ functions the same as any platoon HQ in the Command Phase. It may issue commands to itself and any of the HMG teams, even if the teams are attached to other platoons.

Place the HMG PLT Command Marker on the Command Display at the beginning of the mission.

Example: 2/2 HMG is attached to 1st Platoon at the beginning of the mission; it may receive commands from 1 PLT HQ and HMG PLT HQ.

MISSION 2 - HOLDING THE NAKTONG LINE

August 27 to 30, 1950

Initial Contact with NKPA and Spoiling Attacks

Exhausted after the long battle for the Cloverleaf, the Manchus assume defensive positions along the Naktong River line. Spread thinly over a large area, patrols and raids across the river are needed to prevent enemy infiltration or surprise crossings as had happened on the 5th of August. The Manchus were assigned to a sector of the Naktong River on a frontage of 18km.

Heading out on patrol.

Map	8 columns by 4 rows. Use the same map for each patrol. This map will continue to be used in Mission 3 (see MSR 3).

Mission Objective	Starting on Row 2, you must move the platoon selected to the Primary Objective in Row 4 and return it to Row 2. At least one unit must pass through the Objective and each Route Point. None of the cards are required to be Cleared. Units not taking part in the patrol may set up on row 1.
Tactical Controls	Before the mission begins, place up to 2 foxholes per card anywhere on Row 2. Place the Main Line of Resistance control between Rows 2 and 3. At the start of each patrol, place the Primary Objective on a card of your choice on Row 4. Place an Artillery Concentration marker on any card per 7.16.5. ## Mission Special Rules (MSR)

1. Combat Patrols

- Units not involved in the patrols may be set up on the map. These units may be given orders, and will open fire on enemies in LOS but they may not move, except by automatic retreat, and are not eligible to receive promotions through experience points. Any units not set up on the map are not used in this mission.
- Since only one platoon is actually taking part in the patrol, halve all draws for General Initiative, rounding down (3.3.2d).
- Each patrol is played on the same map. At the end of a patrol, follow the Mission Reattempt sequence described in the rulebook (3.9) to award experience points (note MSR 2), reconstitute your platoon and update the map ready for the next patrol. Replace any removed PC markers. Any skills bought with experience points are carried over to the next mission.
- During a Campaign game, there is no penalty for not completing a Combat Patrol mission (unless you are playing “survivor” mode and somehow have your CO HQ on row 1 become a casualty). Note that only platoons who actually carry out a patrol are eligible to gain experience points (whether the patrol is successful or not).

2. Route Points

- Route Point Control markers must be placed on four separate cards (this may include the Primary Objective). Your units may roam the map freely, but at least one unit must enter each of these cards to successfully complete the patrol.
- Experience points can be awarded for Clearing the same cards as previous patrols (exception to 3.9).

3. The Naktong Line

This map will continue to be used in Mission 3 if playing as a campaign. Remove any cover markers discovered by the patrols from row 4. Retain all other cover and foxholes.

MISSION 3 - NKPA OFFENSIVE ACROSS THE NAKTONG RIVER LINE, PHASE I

August 31 to September 1, 1950

Night Defensive Mission

From their positions on the hilltops and through their patrols, the Manchus had believed they were merely observing the NKPA forces preparing defensive positions to defend against US offensives. What they had in fact been watching were the preparations for a new attack. The North Koreans planned an ambitious, last ditch, all-in offensive to try and crush the ROK and US forces in the Pusan Perimeter. The entire NKPA was committed to attack in five battle groups. The orders were issued on 20 August calling for groups 1 and 2 to attack on the night of 31 August to 1 September to limit the effectiveness of US firepower. Groups 3, 4, and 5 would then attack on the evening of 2 September. The US 2nd Infantry Division spread across the Naktong Bulge would be the target of Group 2. Group 2 was made up of the fresh 9th Division along with the depleted 4th, 2nd, and 10th Divisions. In the darkness of the evening of 31 August NKPA soldiers silently waded across the river and pushed onto the US positions. The Manchus would face off against the NKPA 9th Division. The attack caught the Manchus by surprise and in the middle of a planned raid that went badly.

MISSION 4 - NKPA OFFENSIVE, PHASE II

September 1 and 2, 1950

Day Defensive Mission

The situation at daybreak on 1 September was chaotic, the NKPA had torn a hole in the 2nd Division line splitting the Division in two. The US line had been pushed back from the river and many companies were isolated on high ground and fought for their lives as NKPA forces advanced all around them. The NKPA 9th Division was attacking toward Yongsan with its 1st Regiment on its left (North) and the 2nd Regiment on the right (South). The Division had two battalions of 76mm field artillery, and two tank battalions attached. They were followed by the badly understrength 4th Division (half of which were untrained conscripts, many from the South). They took advantage of its initial success and continued to push throughout the day. 9th RCT needs to halt their advance and sufficiently attrit the North Korean forces to set the conditions to counterattack.

MISSION 5 - TF BRADLEY COUNTERATTACK

September 3, 1950

Offensive vs. Hasty Defense

The NKPA offensive ran out of steam as they fully committed their forces without any reserves to exploit a success. Their strategy was predicated on a US and ROK collapse. When that did not happen, they had to dig in and attempt to hold on to their gains. The US 2nd Infantry Division was split in two parts with a 10km gap between the parts. The Division was organized into two task forces. TF Bradley, named after the Assistant Division Commander Brigadier General Joseph S. Bradley, was the Southern portion that included the battered but unbroken Manchus. A rapid counterattack before the NKPA could dig in too deep was necessary.

US troops advance past a knocked out and burnt North Korean T-34/85.

MISSION 6 - BATTLE FOR HILL 201

September 16 through 19, 1950

Offensive vs. Deliberate Defense

2nd Division launched a three regiment attack to push the NKPA 4th, 9th and 2nd Divisions back across the Naktong River. The Manchus were on the left of the Division and the commanding height in their sector was Hill 201. The NKPA 9th Division doggedly defended their stronghold. The Inchon landing on 15 September took the North Koreans by surprise. As the news spread and the realization that they were about to be cut off the NKPA needed to hold the advancing US and ROK forces long enough to pull out what they could salvage. The Manchus need to take the heights and prevent the NKPA from making an orderly withdrawal.

At the beginning of the mission, up to 12 steps of KATUSA units are added to your company to replace missing rifle squad steps. Unless eliminated, they remain with the company until the end of mission seven. The following rules apply:

-    The Replacement steps can be placed as two-step or three-step squads (rated Green), Fire Teams or Assault Teams. These units are attached to your rifle platoons, but cannot be used to supplement or reconstitute regular squads. Only KATUSA teams may be used to reconstitute a KATUSA squad. KATUSA steps cannot be used to reconstitute a Platoon HQ.
- These Replacements cannot take a platoon above its full rifle squad strength of 9 steps. Unused replacements are posted to other understrength companies.
- KATUSA units cannot be promoted to Veteran experience level (either between Attempts or at the end of the mission).

Design Note: These limitations are more a reflection of the language barrier than ability—they showed no lack of bravery.
